THE POLICE GAZETTE IN A NEW DRESS.

THE POLICE GAZETTE will, next week, appear in a new dress of type, which will undoubtedly make a great improvement in its appearance. It will also be neatly stitched and cut, so that it will be more convenient for its many readers to handle.

THE GAZETTE to-day is better than it has ever been, and it proposes to keep its position at the head of the list of sporting and sensational publications. Since the first of the year there have been many improvements, and a route column, showing the whereabouts of the burlesque companies, vaudeville shows and minstrels is now a permanent feature.

That the department devoted to saloonmen and bartenders is a success was demonstrated long ago. It will be continued on its present lines.

The articles on boxing, illustrated with halftone cuts, have been very favorably received, and it is proposed to continue this series of athletic stories for some time to come.

The free supplements are the best which have ever appeared, and are worth more than the price asked for the paper.

RICHARD K. FOX, Publisher,
NEW YORK.

[WITH PORTRAIT.] Irene Myers is one of the best performers of her age in the country. Her photograph shows her as she appeared in the title role of "Little Lord Fauntleroy" at the Grand Army Theatre, Shamokin, Pa., recently. She is only fourteen years old and is very popular throughout Pennsylvania.

DOROTHY ROSSMORE.

[WITH PORTRAIT.] Miss Dorothy Rossmore, the subject of the accompanying half-tone, plays the difficult role of Sarah Drake, one of the leading female characters in Mr. Gus Hill's scenic production of "Man's Enemy." Miss Rossmore is a talented actress, with graceful curves and lovely dimples; a model of womanly beauty, and yet with all her art and beauty she cannot gain the sympathy of an audience. There is no applause for her. Her art portrays Sarah Drake, and it is the adventures we see, and not the handsome and lovable lady, admired by a host of friends. The lines in the villain's applause. If the art required to produce the emotion of disapproval was employed in a sympathetic part it would bring curtain calls. Miss Rossmore has played this thankless role for two seasons, and previous to that she was a leading member of Morosco's Stock company, of San Francisco, originating the leading female "heavy" role in "Devil's Island."

COLLEGE GIRLS DON THE MITTS.

[SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.] College students of Syracuse, N. Y., are still talking about the glove contest which occurred a short time ago between two extremely athletic and clever young women of a seminary of that town. The bout was pulled off in the gymnasium, and was witnessed by half a dozen members of the same class. It began tamely enough but it soon developed into an exceedingly rapid bout, and then, in what might have been called the fourth round the climax came. One of the contestants received a jolt on the jaw that knocked her down and all but put her out. And so the gloves have been locked up for a while.

ONE LITTLE KISS

NICELY DELIVERED

CAUSED A STRIKE

The Factory Beauty Dared to Kiss Factory Adonis.

CLUB GIRLS IN TROUSERS.

How the Little Town of Benton Harbor, Mich., Was Badly Shocked.

It isn't every day that a simple, every day kiss will stop work in an entire factory, and so, when it does, the fact is worth recording. The prettiest girl in a certain establishment in St. Louis, Mo., threw her arms about a boy's neck and kissed him the other day.

The kiss was witnessed by the foreman and she was discharged. Fifteen other girls immediately left with her. The young man who was kissed is said to be the Adonis of the establishment, and he is the girl's beau. The foreman is also her admirer, but a rather ungallant one, it seems. The other girls teased her and dared her to kiss her lover before them all, and she did so.

The girls who are on strike declare they will not go back until their kisser is restored to her position.

Club Girls Wore Trousers.

A flourishing club of Benton Harbor, Mich., composed of young women who are prominent in society, gave a party recently which has given the town a distinct and decided shock. The girls put on male attire and thus dressed walked through the streets, meeting at the home of one of their members to have a good time. What is deemed to be the most remarkable feature about the meeting was that the young men of the city became aware of what was going on, and waiting until the party was over, insisted on escorting the dancers home.

Women to Duel.

Two athletic young women of Cincinnati, O., will, if plans are not changed and mutual friends do not interfere, fight a duel with rapiers some time during March. Some months ago, the girls, who have been great friends, were in Chicago, where they took fencing lessons from a handsome French expert. They both fell in love with him, and it wasn't long before they were bitter enemies. When they returned to their homes in Cincinnati it seemed as though their hatred for each other increased, and a week ago, when they met on the street, they quarrelled and almost came to blows.

It was then that the challenge was made and accepted. Both have gone into active training for the contest, and no one has been able to discover just when it will be fought, or the exact meeting place. As they are both experts, a lively time may be expected.

Loved a Woman Twice His Age.

A drug-crazed, love-stricken boy of eighteen years, after shooting a man and woman who tried to interfere with him, took his own life in a Denver, Col., apartment house the other day.

He had fallen in love with a woman who was twice his age, but who had never given him any encouragement. She was from Louisville, Ky., and she met the boy when he was an instructor in a bicycle academy. He taught her to ride the wheel. He became infatuated with her and importuned her to marry him, but she refused on account of his extreme youth.

Saved From Drowning by a Girl.

A boy who lives at Upper Merion, Pa., went skating the other day on a pond near Conshohocken. He went through a thin place in the ice, and when he recovered his breath after his icy plunge in the water began to yell for help. A young woman who was skating on the same pond heard him and ran at once to his assistance. She tore a board from a nearby fence and pushed it to him. His own weight broke the ice again and again, but she pluckily held on and finally dragged him ashore. The people of the town are very much inclined to make a heroine of her, and it is very likely she will have a medal.

"ANNUALS" ARE GEMS.

CHICO, Butte County, Cal.
MR. RICHARD K. FOX—Dear Sir: Please send me your "Annual" for 1901. I have had every one since they were issued in '98. They were all little gems, but your 1900 one beat all so far. I live way out here in the north and am the only one in the town that has a little "Annual" in my vest pocket.

Yours respectfully, ALBERT THOMPSON.

HALTED AT THE ALTAR.

[SUBJECT OF ILLUSTRATION.]

A wedding which was to have occurred in the vestry of a church in Boston, Mass., about a week ago was postponed in rather a sensational manner because the bride objected to the sailor garments of her betrothed. He came in a blue shirt and when she saw him she exclaimed:

"You don't marry me in those clothes!"

"Clothes don't make the man," replied the sturdy mariner.

"They do in this case," answered the young woman, tartly, "and you don't marry me until you dress like a gentleman."

He couldn't get his shore clothes at once, so the marriage was indefinitely postponed.

VACCINATION LAMES

—IT WASN'T ON THEIR ARMS—

CHICAGO TELEPHONE GIRLS

Three Hundred of Chicago's Hello Beauties Operated on Complain Because They are Barred From Dancing.

LUCKY MAN SOLD HIS WIFE; LUCKY MAN BOUGHT HER.

A Rather Queer Transaction at Easton, Pa., in Which a Wife Changes Husbands and a Fifty-Cent Piece Changes Owners.

The telephone girls of Chicago—they are all pretty by the way, and who ever heard of a telephone girl that wasn't—have been having all kinds of trouble lately, but the straw that broke the camel's back was the order recently issued by the company which employs them that they be vaccinated on the legs. They don't want their limbs disfigured, but orders are orders, and they have got to put up with them.

So it happened that the services of a woman physician were engaged, and she at once started in to scrape the cuticle at a spot where the garter would not chafe.

The girls took to walking with apained and halting gait, and an expert says that now he can tell a Chicago telephone girl as far as he can see.

"I wouldn't mind it at all," said one of the girls, "if it were not for the pleasures we must forego. We are debarred from skating and dancing until it is over."

"One has to refuse invitations from young men and give some flimsy excuse that they see through and consider due to an objection to their company. You know one cannot explain the peculiar situation to her male friends. So we are misunderstood and mortified."

"I just think every one ought to be vaccinated on the hand, so everybody could see it, and then you would not be embarrassed by people asking if you have been vaccinated. We girls decided that the affair should be kept a secret, but now it's got out and going into the newspapers and everybody will be asking us if it 'took.' Well, mine did, and I am staying home to-day, while all the other girls have gone skating, and here I am trying to be pleasant."

"I think it just horrid; they could have waited until Lent, anyhow," said a telephone operator to one of her companions at the "hello" switchboard.

"What has Lent got to do with vaccination?" asked the companion.

"How in the world can one dance with a horrible vaccination that isn't nearly healed and pains like sixty?"

"I never thought of that," said the other, "and I am to go to a masquerade next Friday, and I know I will have an awful time, for it has taken like a postage stamp on an envelope. No wonder some of the girls are so mad about it."

"Yes; Ella quit rather than be vaccinated any place but on her arm. She said it was an insult to a young woman."

"Don't wear colored hose that creak," was the advice of the gentle manipulator of the scraping blade. "You might get poison in the sore, and that would be worse than the smallpox. Above all, don't dance. Still, there is no use of telling you that; you will know better if you try it."

But there was method in all this seeming vaccination madness and it was explained by the general manager, who said:

"It is not a very pleasant or a very proper thing for an employer to direct a young lady to be vaccinated on the leg, but the Health Department has notified us to have all our people vaccinated, and with 300 girls vaccinated on the arm the telephone service of the city would be badly crippled in a few days. Our switchboard girls are ambidextrous, but if one arm is lame or sore they cannot handle the 'plugs' rapidly enough for the demands of the service. Stern necessity compelled us to comply with the orders of the city by directing the girls to be vaccinated where it will inconvenience the service the least."

Got Work in Man's Clothes.

If ever there was such a thing as a heroine then the woman of Chippewa Falls, Wis., who put on man's clothes to get work to support her family, is entitled to it. Her husband was ill and her four children were on the verge of starvation, and notwithstanding the fact that she was at one time the leader in fashionable society, she put on a suit of workman's clothes, cut off her luxuriant tresses and staling her face with walnut juice, tramped about the town in search of labor by which she could earn enough to buy food for her loved ones. At several of the mills where she applied she was recognized as a woman and ordered from the place. Finally, worn out and discouraged, she applied for work in the woods and was promptly accepted by the agent of the company, who failed to note that she was a woman. Just as she was about to leave the city in company with a large gang of lumber jacks her brother, who had heard of her sad lot and had been searching for her, appeared upon the scene and took her home, where she is now prostrated.

The story leaked out, and to say that it created a sensation would be putting it very mildly indeed. She has really been made a heroine, and it is very likely that her troubles are ended forever. The family will be looked after by relatives and friends, and it has already been made comfortable.

Fifty Cents for a Wife.

There are two men in Easton, Pa., who think themselves very lucky. Whether they really are or not, or whether one is better off than the other, is a question which can be decisively answered in a few months. One of the men is a junk dealer, and the other is an ashman. The junk dealer had a wife, not bad looking, and upon whom the ash dealer had been casting sheep's eyes, which the woman seemed to enjoy. The two were out walking on Northampton street the other evening, when the husband saw them. He didn't lose his temper and want to fight, as most men would have done under the circumstances. Instead, he walked coolly to them, and addressing his wife, asked: "See here, who do you want—this fellow or me?"

"Well," she replied, partly, "you know I never liked you very much."

"Nothing like being candid," remarked the husband.

Then he turned to the ashman and said: "If you like her so well you might as well have her. Give me half a dollar and she's yours."

The ashman dived down in his pocket, brought up the money, handed it over, and the bargain was closed. The ashman, who is not yet twenty-one years old, took the woman to the home of his parents, where he told the story of the purchase. They were so pleased that they immediately decided upon a marriage, and the quartette started for the house of an alderman. He refused to marry them without a license, and they left. It was decided to wait until the next day and get the necessary papers. And there you are!

The question now is, who is the lucky man, the junkman, who got rid of his wife, or the ashman who bought her?

SUGGESTIONS FROM THE FAMOUS FIGHTERS OF TO-DAY.

Old Styles Which Have Been Superseded---Champions All Have Their Own
Peculiarities---Fitzsimmons Talks About Ring Tricks.

(Series No. 9.)

(WRITTEN SPECIALLY FOR THE POLICE GAZETTE.)

There are probably hundreds of tricks of the ring by the use of some of which unscrupulous fighters may often turn the tide of the battle; and there are other tricks which may be used to advantage by honest and square boxers. This latter class of tricks of cleverness, however, are not prohibited by any of the rules of sparring contests, and so can be practiced with impunity by those who know and are disposed to take advantage of them. If a fighter or boxer of the school of thirty or forty years ago were present at a contest between two clever boxers of the present day he could readily perceive and easily describe all of the little tricks of generalship and cleverness which they would practice, says Bob Fitzsimmons. To a boxer of the present day, however, this task becomes more difficult, as so many of these little tricks have become incorporated into the ordinary rules for boxing that it is hard to pick out what is new and has not been touched upon by writers of sporting matters. I confess that I am a trifle confused when I think of this, and, besides, there are many points which may be turned to advantage by a boxer in a contest which it would be well-nigh impossible to describe.

However, I shall start off first with a one of the tricks of unscrupulous pugilists, and, after that, will tell of some used by honest boxers.

When a contest is for a large amount of money there is great temptation to some of those who have money at stake to try and give their favorite the advantage in some way. Often this is done by tampering with the gloves. A boxer cannot be too careful in regard to this, and both he and his seconds should keep an eye on the opponent's corner to see that nothing is done to the gloves. One of the commonest methods of tampering with gloves is what is known as "wringing" them. This is done by working all of the hair away from the centre and into the fingers and back of the gloves. This leaves it so that when the hand is closed there is very little hair covering the hitting portion of the hand. If the gloves are four-ounce ones, and are well "wringed," there will not be as much hair covering the knuckles as there would ordinarily be in two-ounce gloves. Consequently the blows delivered, not being cushioned, will do more damage.

I don't know, however, that there is such a great advantage in "wringing" gloves as some boxers think, for the less covering there is on the hand the more danger there is of breaking it; and then, again, while a bare fist or skin gloves will cut when they hit, the blow is not really so bad as that from a big glove, which bruises the flesh, covers a larger surface and jars the whole body so that the effect may be felt for several days after. Besides this a man with big gloves lets go his blows with a great deal more force and confidence than he would if he were fighting with small ones, as he knows there is not really so much danger of breaking his hand.

Another way of tampering with the gloves is to have something hard inside of them. I have known of a case where a fellow fought with a heavy seal ring on his finger inside of his left glove. He kept jabbing away with his left and did much more execution than he would have done otherwise.

I have known of a case where brass knuckles were used inside of the glove, but at some fights I have witnessed they could have been worn just as well as not, for the principals and seconds on both sides were so interested in themselves that they did not appear to have much time to watch the opposite side, and almost anything could have been done to the gloves without having been discovered at the time.

Perhaps the easiest as well as the most dangerous method of tampering with the gloves is by placing some sort of drug upon them, which when placed against either the eyes or nostrils of the other man will affect him badly, either deadening him or blinding him for a moment or two, when the man with the drugged gloves would have time and opportunity to either knock his man out or gain a lead which it would be next to impossible for the drugged man to overcome. Some who read this may smile and say this method of tampering with the gloves would be next to impossible in its accomplishment without being observed by some one. If one is disposed to be unfair, however, it is very easy to do, as when the principal is in his corner and his seconds are working on him it would be possible for the second to pour the contents, or a portion of it, of a half-ounce vial upon the pugilist's side or thigh. Then what would be more natural than for the man to rub or scratch his side or thigh with the end of his glove. Then at infighting it would be the easiest thing in the world for a man to hold the glove with the drug on it for a moment to his opponent's nose or eyes and the thing is done. A man who has put the drug on his glove, however, wants to be very careful not to rub his own eyes or his nose with the same glove or all his well laid plans for cheating the other man out of the fight would fall hopelessly.

I am not going to tell the names of the drugs which can and have been used for this purpose, and there are several of them, for it is just as well if you don't know them that you should remain in ignorance, as you would never want to use them anyway, while this article might chance to meet the eye of some one who would be unfair enough to try the trick. In order to block this scheming trick it is always well for a second to take a small bottle of ammonia to the ring side and if the principal comes to his corner in a dazed condition a couple of good smells of the ammonia will freshen him up and counteract the effect of any drug which he might have inhaled.

Often fighters have been known to wear spiked shoes into a ring and have used these murderous weapons to help them win a fight. This especially in London prize ring rules where wrestling is allowed. In reading over something about Dempsey's record I see that in his fight with Johnny Reagan the latter wore spiked shoes, and I cite this as an instance where spikes were used, whether intentionally or not I can't say. I hardly think, from Reagan's reputation as a pugilist, that the spiking was intentional, and as I did not see the mill I cannot of course pass judgment. However that may be from the account I should judge that Dempsey was badly spiked about the legs and was quite faint from loss of blood, but for all that he did not lose the fight.

Here is another little unfair trick which I have seen practiced by a certain pugilist and which escaped the notice of the referee. It was a blow below the belt with the left, though it was ostensibly aimed to land in the pit of the stomach. As the man steps in to deliver it, however, he twists his hand downward and the blow lands considerably below the belt and is liable to do a great deal of damage in a fight, and would escape the attention of the referee and most of the spectators ninety-nine times out of a hundred, although in all probability the man receiving the blows would be out of the fight long before he had been struck a tenth of that number of blows.

As a matter of course it is unfair when two boxers are clinched for either one of them to strike when breaking away. It is often done intentionally and is passed over by the referee on the supposition that frequently a man in the excitement of the moment forgets himself and delivers the blow without the least intention of doing anything unfair. Now, in my battle with Jack Dempsey, when we were breaking away, he hit me, but I firmly believe it was an unintentional blow, and he immediately excused himself. Unlike him, however, there are pugilists who strike the blow intentionally every time they get a chance, and then say it was accident.

Then there are many tricks which can be done with the elbow or knee. Of course, they are fouls and should be claimed by the man upon whom they are practiced. Nevertheless, unscrupulous pugilists often use their elbow when clinched, placing it against their opponent's throat and forcing his head back, or in the pit of his stomach and pressing it with all their strength right at the point where it will do the most damage to their antagonist's wind. It is at close quarters, also, that the knee is used, and a blow from it often passes either unobserved by most of the outsiders and the referee, or is done so adroitly that it looks as if it were an accident.

Every one knows that a butt with the head is a foul, and yet I have seen this also done so neatly by a foul fighter that the fight went on without the referee even cautioning the man; and in the fight I refer to it was this one butt more than anything else which caused the man to win his fight. Back-heeling is also a foul, and a man should be very careful when breaking away from his opponent that he is not cleverly back-heeled in a manner which will make it look like an accident, and thrown heavily to the floor. Most rings are pitched on board floors, and I have known a man to be knocked cut by back-heeling and having his head strike the timber.

Another trick which has been used very successfully by some boxers when contesting under London prize ring rules is when wrestling with an opponent to make it a point to fall heavily on top of him, crushing the wind out of him as much as possible. Then some tricky fighters, when they feel tired and want to gain time and wind, will fall down when only the faintest suspicion of a blow is struck, and sometimes without being struck at all, thereby being enabled to take their ten seconds on the floor and get just as much rest.

SHARKEY TRAINS AT HOT SPRINGS

Advises from Hot Springs, Ark., say that Tom Sharkey continues to work hard every day, and right now is fit to step into the ring and do battle with any of the heavyweights. Tom takes a ten-mile run over the mountains every morning clothed in big, heavy sweaters, and upon his return to the hotel goes immediately into the bath house and enjoys a hot bath. Then he has a vigorous rubdown, dries his clothes and takes a stroll around the clubs and poolrooms until 12 o'clock, when he partakes of a light lunch. At 2 o'clock he does dumbbell work, skips the rope some thousand times, punches the bag for twenty minutes and then spars four fast rounds with "Spider" Kelly.

DIXON SHOWS OLD-TIME FORM.

The Ex-Featherweight Champion Puts Up a Lively Bout with Sturdy Harry Lyons.

George Dixon, the former featherweight champion, showed some of his old-time form in Baltimore, Md., on February 8, when he fought Harry Lyons, of Chicago, a twenty-round draw. He was under an eight pound disadvantage in weight, but at that Lyons was able to do but little damage to the famous colored nonpareil.

In spite of reports to the contrary Dixon was in fine condition and fought like the old featherweight champion. He was fast, his hand had little difficulty in holding his own.

Dixon at the start showed he was the cleverer man. For eight rounds he had by far the better of the bout, but after that Lyons' superior weight began to tell, and had it not been for the ex-champion's cleverness matters might have gone hard with him. Lyons was, however, unable to land effectively.

George's eye was the only part that showed any ill effects of the battle. Lyons played for the head throughout, with the exception of the third and fourth rounds, when he shot for the stomach.

The entire bout, while very pretty from a scientific standpoint, was rather tame.

SIX HARD-FOUGHT BATTLES.

New York Sports Enjoy Some Cock Fighting in a Barn.

New York and Brooklyn sports to the number of 300 crowded around a pit in a barn outside the limits of the quiet Long Island village of Hempstead the other night to witness a cocking main. It proceeded to a finish without interruption by the authorities.

The birds were from Hempstead and Oyster Bay. Six mains were fought, four of which were won by Hempstead. According to the handlers the Hempstead birds were better trained than their adversaries.

In the first bout an Oyster Bay pyle and Hempstead saddle back picked at each other for 15 minutes before the Hempstead bird gaffed its antagonist to death. Half an hour of struggling was required before Hempstead's representative killed his bird in the second tussle.

The best battle of the main was the next, in which both birds picked and tore savagely for more than an hour. The Oyster Bay bird toppled over dead at last and the victor, the victor dropping in his last throes a few seconds later.

Hempstead won the fourth, Oyster Bay the fifth, between one-eyed warriors, and Hempstead the final combat.

JEFFRIES AND RUHLIN

WHILE FIGHT IN THE COURTS GOES ON

KEEP UP THEIR TRAINING

Gov. Nash Sanctions the Adjournment of the Supreme Court to Block an Appeal, and Has the State Militia in Readiness.

FINISH OF GEORGE DIXON'S FISTIC CAREER POINTS A MORAL

Fistic Exponent Got Time to Think---'Frisco's Welcome to Kennedy---When a Fight Built a Church---Gossip.

"Under the evidence before me a glove contest has the aspect of a prize fight."—JUDGE HOLLISTER.

Rather an ominous utterance to emanate from the lips of a learned gentleman upon whom the duty has devolved of determining whether an injunction against the Jeffries-Ruhlin contest in Cincinnati shall be issued or not. At the time of writing this, the matter has not been definitely determined, but everything points to the probability that the courts will not take a favorable view of the matter and the fighters will be forced to go elsewhere in search of a battleground. Even if the evidence yet to be brought forward is of a nature to justify Judge Hollister in denying the application for an injunction and it is decided to appeal to the Supreme Court, the fight promoters will find their efforts there blocked by Gov. Nash, who has been instrumental in having the Supreme Court of the State adjourn until four days after the date selected for the proposed bout. Gov. Nash has also arranged for an appropriation of $50,000 to be used in defraying the expenses of several regiments of militia which he intends to press into service if any attempt is made to hold the fight in opposition to legal authority.

That in brief is the situation as it exists to-day, and nobody can say that the prospects are particularly bright for holding the fight. While the promoters of the contest have done everything in their power to hold the boxing contest peaceably and lawfully, they do not propose to resort to anything to the contrary if the contest shall not be allowed. Some reports have been circulated that there would be more excitement over the meeting of the State and municipal authorities than over the boxing contest, but evidently there is no ground for such apprehension.

There has been considerable talk about postponing the contest. If Judge Hollister shall allow the injunction, the defendants will appeal at once to the Circuit Court, and if they lose in that intermediate court they will carry the case to the Supreme Court. If this course is pursued the contest may be postponed from one to two weeks. The promoters do not want to postpone the date any longer than possible owing to other engagements.

Even if everything is most favorable a postponement seems inevitable, for the necessity of a large attendance will urge the promoters to do everything in their power to get the sporting men from New York and other remote places to the ring side. As it is now the attendance has been killed by the legal fight and the existing doubts and fears about the contest taking place. The Saengerfest people are not in the fight promoting business for their health, and it is obvious that if they hold the fight at all it will be under the most favorable auspices for making up the $40,000 deficit in the treasury for which the affair was originally planned.

"That's a tough graft for Dixon," said the office boy the other day as he stood at my elbow, reading the account of the bout in Baltimore between the greatest little pugilist of his time, and Harry Lyons. The affair had all the earmarks of having been prearranged, simply because Dixon, who has not been himself of late, and in no condition to do any fighting, was hardly a match in physical shape for a strong, capable lad like Lyons. At the lowest calculation Dixon has been in the ring 800 times. His fights and his vaudeville ventures on the road have probably netted him $300,000. Always a liberal spender his dissipation tore great holes in his bank roll and finally he blew the whole bundle and the finish of his real fighting career found him dead broke. Sincere efforts on the part of his friends to put him upon his feet again proved fruitless, and now in his declining years he finds himself compelled to box for a mere pittance. Surely Dixon's experience points a moral.

It got to a point the other day where a certain well known exponent of the fistic art found it incumbent upon him to dig up the price of the evening chops and the privilege of resting until morning in the feathers. The mere thought of going to work pushing a motor car gave him a chill so it was not surprising that when a "whaler" with more silver in his jeans than he was able to take care of ambled along the Bowery our fistic friend annexed himself to the combination long enough to separate one from the other. A wide-open flatty piped the thing come off and nabbed the pug as he was about to take it on the hot foot for the stew works. Next morning the judge asked him in a perfunctory sort of a way how he happened to have the goods on him.

"I'm trying to think, your honor. Give me time."
"Very well," replied the judge, blandly. "Six months."

I am not inclined to believe that there will be any bands of music in waiting or any crowd of leather-lunged shouters when Jim Kennedy, the Eastern sport promoter, arrives in San Francisco for the purpose of taking charge of the boxing game. His advent is not viewed with any too much joy by the local promoters, and the press does not speak any too enthusiastically about the reforms he proposes to institute. Here is what the San Francisco Chronicle has to say on the subject:

"The Twentieth Century Club seems to have been lost in the shuffle, and the imported manager who announced his departure from New York has not appeared. The chances are that he has not left New York

yet. He has probably not awakened since he proclaimed to the Eastern press that he had been summoned to come out to the coast and purify the sport. There is no doubt that Jim Kennedy is a clever and able manager of sporting events and that an improvement is needed here, but he is not the only one in the world who can attend to all the improving that is needed here. Though Kennedy might be acceptable to local sports if he could overcome the prejudice he has created against himself by his wild remarks; there is no excuse in the world for him to bring Charley White out here to referee any fights. There is one thing about the pugilistic game here that is first class, and that is the referees, in whom the local followers of the game have full confidence. The public will have more confidence in them than in any imported referee, no matter how clever he may be.

It may be open to argument whether Kennedy will be any improvement upon Groom, Gibbs, Mitchell, Gregains and that crowd, but there is no doubt that White will make a distinct hit if Wyatt Earp is the kind of referees they refer to.

The efforts which the directors of the Saengerfest Society, of Cincinnati, made to raise $40,000 to pay off a debt through the medium of the Jeffries-Ruhlin fight reminds me of an episode in the life of a celebrated Bishop now located in the Northwest. The sermons of this justly worthy clergyman are severe in doctrine and hold out little hope to sinners unless they repent. However, the Bishop knows human nature. He learned it in the best school for an education of that kind—the far West.

Years ago, when the Bishop was a recent graduate from the theological seminary, he began his gospel work in Butte, Mont. The town was then a mining camp pure and simple. It had saloons, dance halls and gambling rooms, but neither church nor school. Its inhabitants were rough, tough and ready—manliness was their god, and it was this manliness which made the West what it is.

At college the young divine was a boxer and an oarsman. In Butte these accomplishments served him well, for they gave him a strong arm and a quick eye. His gospel services were held in a tent. There was no money to build a church.

One day as he was walking along the principal street the bully of the town approached him.

"Do you want to fight?" asked the desperado.

"No," replied the clergyman.

"Then take that!"

But "that" never came. The clergyman waded off the blow and with his good right fist sent the bully to grass in scientific fashion.

That night the affair was talked over in Cy Henry's gambling house.

"I like that minister chap," said Bill Johnson.

"He strikes a good blow. Let's all play for him to-night."

The proposition was agreed to, and the next morning $1,800 won at faro was presented to the minister. That money built the first church in Butte.

When Terry McGovern reaches San Francisco on his travels he will in all probability find awaiting him an Australian, Tim Hegerty, who wants to battle for the featherweight and lightweight championship. ## FINISH FIGHT

IN YOUNG JACKSON'S FAVOR

IN THE OLD STYLE

Governors of Two States Try to Stop It and Fail.

SPECTATORS HAVE TROUBLE

Eddie Croake Knocked Out in the Twelfth Round of a Lively Mill.

The prospect of witnessing an old-time prize fight to a finish interested about 400 Chicago sports on Feb. 4, and their expectations were fully realized, but not until the power of two State governors had been defied for several hours, chased by sheriffs and threatened with the militia. The affair, which was between Young Peter Jackson of San Francisco and Eddie Croake of Clinton, Ia., was finally pulled off at Gilbert, Ill., about daybreak and resulted in Jackson knocking Croake out in the twelfth round.

Those who were "in the know" had gathered at Belvidere, where the bout was advertised to take place, but Governor Yates telegraphed the sheriff of the county not to permit the fight. It was then decided to cross the line to Wisconsin and fight in that State, but Governor La Follette wired the officials of the Northwestern railway that they would be held responsible as abettors if they brought the train into Wisconsin for the purpose of having a fight decided there and this plan was killed.

Along about daybreak the train pulled into Gilbert, a small station twenty-eight miles from Belvidere, where the opera house, as the only hall in the village is designated, was unlocked and heated. In a short time a ring had been constructed and the men prepared for battle.

The betting was 2 to 1 on Croake before the fight, but at the beginning of the sixth round it had shifted to 2 to 1 on Jackson. The fight was one of the fiercest seen in that State for some time. Croake put up a game fight for the first half dozen rounds, but the superior skill and hitting power of Jackson began to tell by that time and soon it was but a question of the number of rounds.

Croake was knocked down seven times and twice took the count of nine, but each time he fought back gamely and kept out of reach until the end of the round. By this means he stayed round after round, lasting until the last of the twelfth, when he was put out by a right uppercut on the jaw.

Jackson went to the floor but once and then he slipped, Croake landing just as the colored man was falling. He was up in an instant and showed that no harm had been done him. George Siler was referee.

OSHKOSH SPORTS HOLD FIGHTS.

The Oshkosh (Wis.) Athletic Club, which is composed of 200 of the young business men of the city, has gone into the boxing business and gave its first series of bouts the other evening in which Joe Percante was given the decision over Harry Spore, and the preliminary contest between Jack Lewis and Otto Slesoff of Chicago was declared a draw by Referee Jimmy Bartell.

The match between Slesoff and Lewis was nothing to become very enthusiastic over. The club being in its infancy and its members being unused to the ways of boxers, were well satisfied, however, and the occasional vigorous mixing up between the two strangers from Chicago was sufficient to please the spectators. It was for eight rounds. They fought one arm free. Slesoff was the aggressor throughout and in the second round Lewis landed on Slesoff with sufficient force to knock him completely out of the ring to the floor. Slesoff was up and on the platform before the limit expired. Again in the third round he went to the floor, this time inside the ropes. There was little advantage to either during the remainder of the contest, although Lewis could see out of but one eye when the referee called the bout a draw.

RACE ACROSS THE ATLANTIC.

Another Trans-Atlantic voyage in a miniature craft is on the tapis, and an element of novelty will be given to it in the form of a race, in which a pretty young eighteen-year-old girl will be one of the participants. Some time ago a man named Howard Blackburn issued a challenge to race anyone across the Atlantic. An acceptance of this challenge has just been received. It reads:

Having won distinction as a swimmer, Miss Albine Carpenter, of Nashua, N. H., is ambitious to become a Trans-Atlantic voyager. She has therefore signified her intention to accept the challenge of Howard Blackburn, of Gloucester, to race across the ocean in cockleshells.

Blackburn's boat, the Great Republic, is 25 feet long, 7 feet beam, and 3½ feet deep; but Miss Carpenter will sail in a canvas boat 11 feet long, now being built by Capt. A. C. Andrews, the "Lone Voyager," who will act as skipper.

The challenge of Blackburn, who has neither feet nor hands, is for a race from Gloucester to Lisbon, Portugal, for $100 a side, or more.

Miss Carpenter, who is of attractive appearance, is of French descent. Her parents are dead, and she has but few relatives.

Miss Carpenter and Capt. Andrews intend to travel through the principal cities of England after the race, which is expected to take nearly sixty days.

Food will be carried in air-tight cans, which will use up nearly all the spare room in the boat.

FIGHT DOINGS IN SOUTH AFRICA.

Jack Barnes Says It Will be the Sport After the War.

(SPECIAL TO THE POLICE GAZETTE.)

CAPE TOWN, South Africa, Jan. 1.—Not having much to do I thought I could not do better than drop you a line and tell you how it happened. Last summer the Phoenix Club was organized in London by Englishmen who had resided in Johannesburg and waiting to go back. It is their intention to make this one of the biggest fighting clubs in the world. As there will be unlimited capital back of it I will want the best men here to be got in America and England as soon as I get started.

I signed a contract for five years to manage the club last October. My instructions were to proceed to Johannesburg immediately and get the show in running order, but I have been here in Cape Town for two months and it looks like staying for some time to come, as things look worse here now than they did a year ago. At present writing there is a Boer army only eighty miles from here, and they're not doing a thing. Every one has got orders here in Cape Town that they must fight, as it has come to a show down. Well, I come down here for fighting, but not with the Boers, as they hit in the break-downs and they pay not a bit of attention to the referee's order.

I engaged a local theatre for a month and have been running a vaudeville show to big business. Jack Everhardt and George P. Gardner come with me, and I have just brought off my first fight between Everhardt and a man named Lator. They fought at catch weights, Everhardt about 140 pounds and Lator about 150 pounds. Everhardt put him out in the first round. Total expense of show $100; receipts $3,000.

I am now arranging for Gardner to fight Tom Duggan, of Australia. The fight is to take place at Durban. I have also arranged for Everhardt to step two middleweights in ten rounds each, fifteen minutes rest between each contest. Their names are Kennedy and Cutler. They are big strong fellows, but slow. I think Jack will trim them. There is lots of money here, but things are terrible high. As soon as the war is over this will be the greatest spot on earth to get the coin. As to the climate I have been all over the world but this is the finest that ever I have found. Hot in the day time and cool at night, fine clear sky, heat about 90 to-day. But when will the war be over? Give me a tip and you're in half with what I make.

Jack Hilderbrandt, of Denver, and Charley Holmes are here running a sporting and betting house and are making more money than Cecil Rhodes, and they deserve it as they are both prisoners and cannot do too much for any American boys that come here. Jack Everhardt and George Gardner join in wishing you, Mr. Fox and the POLICE GAZETTE a prosperous New Year.

JOHN B. BARNES.

BERRY FOUGHT WITH ONE HAND.

Milwaukee Sports Witness Some Good Boxing by Local Men.

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Feb. 2, 1901.—The largest crowd, fully 1,000 people, that has attended a boxing show in Milwaukee since the revival of the sport a couple of years ago, was at the West Side Armory last evening, to witness the bouts of the Milwaukee Boxing Club, and they left well satisfied, though the battles did not come up to the standard, a very high standard, by the way, of the last few bouts in Milwaukee.

Mickey Riley and Charlie Berry, both of this city, met in a six

PONS-ROEBER

WRESTLED OVER AN HOUR

BUT NO FALLS

A Slow, Uninteresting Struggle in the Frenchman's Favor.

ROEBER ALWAYS ON DEFENSE

Neither Man Showed Real Championship Form and Spectators Were Bored.

Ernest Roeber, the American champion Greco-Roman wrestler, and Paul Pons, a giant Gaul, who enjoys a similar distinction in his own country, wrestled for an hour and seventeen minutes at Madison Square Garden on February 6 without either gaining a fall. The affair attracted considerable attention and according to a very conservative calculation 7,000 people were in the vast amphitheatre to witness the struggle. They were wildly enthusiastic for something to happen, but instead of witnessing a tussle calculated to excite them to applaud, they saw two lumbering giants, so big that they were almost in their own way, squirming, wriggling, pulling and tugging at each other in what might be called an effort to show how really unscientific they could be. The only evident interest the affair had for the spectators was when the two men shouldered each other and barely escaped coming to blows.

No decision was rendered because the police authorities refused to allow the bout to proceed after midnight, and as no fall had been gained Mr. White had no other alternative than to leave the question of supremacy open for settlement at some other time. The agreement that no decision would be rendered unless a fall was gained was a rank injustice to the Frenchman, for according to all known rules of wrestling he should have been awarded the honors by reason of his having done the greater amount of work and evinced more of a disposition to wrestle than his opponent, Roeber, who contented himself with kneeling on the mat clearly on the defensive all the time to offset Pons' efforts to "hog" him. The match was at Greco-Roman style, no hold barred, best two out of three falls, both shoulders on the mat.

The contest as it resulted showed that the Frenchman was as powerful as his fame abroad warranted. He was as deliberate as ever, and had been quick his work against the supple Roeber might have been more effective. Roeber's husky form withstood the Frenchman's most desperate efforts.

The American champion doubled himself into a knot and buried his head, set on the shortest and thickest of necks, in the canvas. Try as he might Pons never could get his arm under for the strangle, or even for the hammer lock hold.

Roeber put up a scientific defense, and his cleverness not only saved him, but three times enabled him to get strangles on his adversary that looked promising to his friends. On each occasion, however, Pons by bull strength broke the hold, and in a moment was on top, tugging and dragging as before.

The Frenchman had a huge advantage in size, height and weight. Roeber had only 190 pounds and five feet seven inches in height to put against his opponent's 280 pounds and six feet three inches.

After Announcer Harvey had explained the conditions of the match the bout began at 10:33.

They sparred around for a hold for a couple of minutes, the Frenchman wary and deliberate, Roeber quick and slippery and showing plenty of skill in eluding his heavy antagonist. Roeber went to the floor with a waist hold, and after Pons had pulled and tugged at him for five minutes he slipped out and had Pons on the mat. He got the strangle on his man, but the Frenchman slipped through the hold like an eel.

They worked on the floor for a few minutes longer, then Roeber jerked through and they jockeyed for another hold from one side of the ring to the other. Pons reached out every now and then, and taking the American champion by the back of the neck shook him like a terrier shaking a rat. There was some rough work in this sparring around, and Roeber looked at times as though he would retaliate with a swing on the Frenchman's jaw. Pons in his deliberateness seemed a bit careless.

Twice Roeber caught a waist hold on Pons, but the big man had no difficulty in tearing his hands away. Finally, like a flash, Roeber twisted over and took the strangle hold again. He half turned his man over and put him down, and the crowd was on its feet cheering like mad. But the Frenchman was too powerful. He broke the hold by a supreme effort, and they began all over again.

They moved in and out along the edges of the mat, and the more the Frenchman twisted and shook Roeber's neck the more enraged became the German. The match developed for the time being into a pushing, shoving, shouldering contest, in which the big Parisian had much the better of it. They were working with sweat, particularly Roeber, and Pons found it a practical impossibility to get his hands on the body of his sturdy opponent long enough to put him on the floor. Roeber bent low down, and kept his short, thick neck well protected with his forearm, and when he was in danger he dodged around the ring.

After twenty minutes of this hustling Pons went to the mat. Roeber watched him closely, and it was evident all the German was waiting for was another chance to get his arm around the Frenchman's head. For the third time he succeeded in doing this, and he held it longer than on the other two occasions, but for the third time Pons broke away at the critical moment.

There wasn't much doing the next twenty minutes. Both plainly were tired, and Pons was glad to get on his knees on the mat. He dropped heavily, and almost instantly Roeber took a half-hammer lock. He failed to turn his man, however, and the hour ended with both men gasping for breath, holding onto each other.

After an interval of ten minutes they resumed the struggle. They wrestled about fifteen minutes when Police Inspector Thompson stepped to the ring and ordered the men to cease the struggle. Pons had all the best of the match but failed to gain a fall.

In the preliminaries Charles Leonhardt of Newark, N. J., vs. Albert Kramer of New York. Leonhardt scored first fall in 3 minutes 10 seconds. Leonhardt got second fall in 5 minutes 45 seconds and bout.

Phil Kreis, Hell Gate A. C., vs. James Erdman of New York. Kreis got first fall in 2 minutes 5 seconds. Kreis got the second fall in 1 minute 42 seconds and bout.

George Bohner, New York, vs. Robert Griffin of Fall River, catch-as-catch-can. Bohner scored the first fall in 5 minutes and 2 seconds. Bohner scored the second fall in 7 minutes 3 seconds and bout.

BOXING IN CHICAGO.

The Ginsburg West End Sporting Club gave their weekly private boxing entertainment at their club rooms, West Fourteenth street, Chicago, Ill., on Sunday, Feb. 4. It was to be a six-round go between Max Winkles and Fred Dupery, both weighing 122 pounds each. The bout lasted but one round, Winkles being the victor in one minute and thirty seconds.

CLUB FOR WIFE BEATER.

Neighbor Women Interfere and Give Him a Good Beating.

Wife beating has become so common in Trenton, N. J., that some of the women decided to give the cowardly husbands a taste of their own medicine. The other night a man went home from work and found his wife at the wash tub. He complained because supper was not ready and when his wife suggested that if he did more work and earned more money he would get more food, he took umbrage at her remarks and gave her a beating.

Three women neighbors heard the wife's cries. They armed themselves with clubs and going into her home thrashed the brute husband until he begged for mercy. Then they went to the police station and had him arrested.

When he appeared at the station he looked as if he had been run through a threshing machine. He promised not to beat his wife again and to make the promise more binding the judge put him under $200 bonds.

BARTENDERS Are Kindly Requested To Send In New Recipes for Publication in POLICE GAZETTE

POLICE GAZETTE TONSORIALISTS

Ignazio Pazio, a New Yorker, Who is a Champion.

Ignazio Pazio is the owner of a very well equipped shop at 464 West Thirty-fifth street, New York. He claims to be the champion pompadour hair cutter, and consequently is prepared to defend his title against all comers. He has been in business twelve years and during all that time he has been a constant reader of the POLICE GAZETTE. He is an expert at his business and is willing to meet any man in the State in a shaving or hair cutting contest.

TONSORIAL NOTES.

Otto Ehrlich has a nicely equipped shop at 513 North Howard street, Baltimore, Md.

Harry Freedman, expert barber, has a fine shop at 803 East Baltimore street, Baltimore, Md.

Up-to-date barbers of Baltimore, Md., are P. Bearsh & Son, of Hanover and Baltimore streets.

George H. Dapper's barber shop at 112 South Broad street, Trenton, N. J., has a well earned reputation.

Joseph J. Back, an expert tonsorialist of Baltimore, Md., has a handsome shop at 2 North Howard street.

Paul Pinkus makes a specialty of hair cutting at his shaving parlor, 1113 East Baltimore street, Baltimore, Md.

The New York Barbers' Union would like to enforce a rule that customers must have clean faces before they are shaved.

Charles J. Steindler always keeps the "Police Gazette" on file in his shaving parlor, at 524 West Franklin street, Baltimore, Md.

The barbers in New York are said to be the hardest worked men of their profession in the country. The Central Federated Union has urged its members not to get shaved after 8 o'clock in the evening.

H. J. Troxell is the popular owner of the Arcade Barber Shop and Pool Room of Egypt, Pa. It is the largest establishment in the country. Troxell is the long distance amateur champion bicycle rider of Clarion county, and is one of the best known sporting men in the State.

Gus Matthews has a fine shop at 18 Twentieth street, Troy, N. Y., the walls of which are handsomely decorated with POLICE GAZETTE supplements. He has a fine shaving record of fifteen men in an hour without assistance. He has a four-chair shop and the POLICE GAZETTE is always on file.

TO BARBERS.

Paragraphs concerning the doings of tonsorialists will be published in this column. Send them in.

A LIVELY TOWN.

A Few Paragraphs About Ballston Spa, N. Y., and its Prominent Men.

According to Henry J. Schuster, a prominent barber of Ballston Spa, N. Y., there are going to be lively times at the spring election in that town. Popular Thomas Finley seems to be slated for mayor, and his brother Hugh is the firemen's choice for village trustee, as he is a great favorite with the boys in the red shirts. Police Justice Andrew J. Freeman, who has filled his position to the satisfaction of his friends and constituents, will probably be nominated again. W. W. Brown and Joe King are both favorites in the race for the nomination for Justice of the Peace. They are such good fellows that it is difficult to make a selection.

Ed Coy, the genial bartender of the Union Hotel, is a clever boxer, and is afraid of no man in a friendly bout at 130 pounds.

The Chief of Police of Ballston Spa is one of the most efficient and capable men who have ever held that office.

Schuster and Cole's barber shop is one of the political centres of the town, and the POLICE GAZETTE is always to be found on file. Both men are experts in their line, and they have a fine trade.
